"Sue delivered an AMAZING session. Can't wait to implement. Every teacher needs a bit of Sue in their lives!"

Lauren Wright, assistant headteacher, Little Readings Primary and Bushey Meads Secondary

"An informative day that will undoubtedly impact upon the teaching and learning of all children at our school."

Kirsty Walker, deputy head, Queen Victoria Primary School

Challenge in the everyday classroom

A one-day workshop to help you improve school-wide provision for more able learners, in the context of challenge for all.

Who should attend? More able coordinators, headteachers and SLT

This workshop will help you:

- Understand the national context, including the Ofsted agenda
- Define and identify more able learners in your school
- Consider the needs of more able learners, including underachievers
- Review policy and planning across your school
- Develop strategies to challenge all learners
- Take away practical ideas and materials to use in the classroom

Cost

NACE members £195 +VAT

Non-members £315 +VAT

Challenge in the everyday classroom

Workshop lead

Sue Mordecai

Sue has taught in both primary and secondary schools. Until recently she was the head of school improvement for a local authority. She is currently a director on the board of a multi-academy trust where she chairs the Education Scrutiny Committee, as well as serving as an external adviser to the governing body of a large comprehensive school.

Sue has been involved in the writing of national materials commissioned by both Welsh and English governments, has authored articles and resources related to more able learners, and has been an adviser to education publisher Rising Stars. She is a trustee and former chair of NACE.
